Southeast Asia A Resource Unit for Secondary Schools

This publication is a resource unit, intended as a compilation of aims, methods, and resources from which teachers (and in some cases pupils) can draw for more specific teaching units. Or it can be used for the enrichment of classes where textbooks are relied upon heavily.

The materials in this unit are intended for secondary school classes in the social studies. Some easier reading materials are also included to provide for the slow readers in junior and senior high schools.

This unit includes materials on Southeast Asia in general, Burma, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaya, the Philippines, Thailand, and Viet Nam (North and South). It does not include Formosa or Taiwan, Hong Kong, Singapore, or the disputed parts of Indonesia.

Organization of a Teaching Unit

There are many ways to organize teaching units on Southeast Asia. Perhaps the most advisable way is to spend a few days with a class on this area as a whole, followed by a period of work on individual countries by committees, and climaxed by a few days as a whole in which these committees report to the group. Some individuals may wish to work on individual topics in addition to or in place of working on a committee, taking topics which cut across all these countries or most of them, such as religion, industrialization, village life, problems of new nations, etc. etc.

A suggested outline of a month's work on this part of the world might look something like this:

Introduction and Planning	2 days	Class as a whole
Getting committees organized	2 days	Working in committees
Southeast Asia-General	3 days	Class as a whole
Intensive committee work	5 days	Working in committees
Reports from committees	6 days	Class as a whole
Culminating activities	2 days	Class as a whole

Suggested Committees: Burma, Cambodia-Laos-the Viet Nams, Malaya, Indonesia, Thailand, and the Philippines.

Some Ideas to Emphasize

It may be difficult to look at this part of the world except through "American eyes", but as objective a view should be taken as is possible. This is a different part of the world, with different values and different ways of life from ours. This should be kept in mind throughout the study. Over and over it should be pointed out that most of these people are farmers or fishermen, living in villages. They live in the "larger family" unit and for the most part are Buddhists. They may be economically underdeveloped (except in certain parts), but they are not "backward". They have developed some aspects of life to a higher degree than we have in the Western World. Their geographical position in relation to China and Russia needs to be taken into account in discussions of politics and their place in "the cold war", as well as other actors, such as the large Chinese minorities, their urge to get on with the job of raising living standards, and their size. These and other values need to be constantly in the minds of teachers when guiding studies of this area.

General Aims of Units

Several aims are listed below. There are too many for all of them to be covered adequately in any single unit on this part of the world. Teachers and pupils should develop their own aims, possibly using this list as a guide for consultation. Aims should be developed for each specific class, bearing in mind the need for aims which include behavior, attitudes, skills, knowledge and big ideas or concepts.

1. To understand the geographic base of individual nations and of this entire area--and its effects. Climate, location, resources, etc.
2. To understand and respect the variety of peoples in Southeast Asia and something of their backgrounds.
3. To understand the variety of ways of living and why they have arisen. Aspects which might well be retained--aspects which might need to be changed for 20th century living.
4. To understand the agriculture of this area, with special reference to the growing of rice.
5. To understand land systems and the changes in land being made in some countries.
6. To understand the appeal of communism to some people.
7. To understand the hostility to colonialism and imperialism.
8. To understand the reasons of some persons for an "independent" or "neutralist" position in the "cold war".
9. To understand the importance of creating national security and building national unity in the new nations.
10. To understand the role played by religions--especially Buddhism, in this part of the world.
11. To understand the changing patterns of life resulting from urbanization and industrialization.
12. To understand the role of "the larger family"--its strengths and weaknesses in today's world.
13. To appreciate the contributions of this part of the world in music, the dance, art, etc.
12. To understand the complicated relations of this part of the world with the U.S.A.--in trade, politics, etc.
13. To understand the importance of education---in the past and in the present, with special reference to the education of boys in Buddhist monasteries.
14. To learn something about some of the leaders of Southeast Asia.
15. To develop skills in map work, reading, committee-ing, etc.
16. To arouse an interest in this area for future study on the part of a few pupils at least.
17. To develop more interest in current affairs and newspaper reading.

Some Possible Introductory Activities

Although mentioned as introductory activities, some of these can be used in other parts of a unit.

1. Show a film or filmstrip such as "New South Asia"(National Film Board)--a film, or "Living in Southern Asia"--a filmstrip. (See film and filmstrip lists for further data.
2. Invite a visitor from Southeast Asia to spend a day in school, giving them an opportunity to watch and listen as well as speak.
3. Make use of current events on this area to introduce your study.
4. Take a trip to a Museum which features Asian materials.
5. Read aloud passages from William Douglas' North from Malaya, James Michener's Voice of Asia, or some other material.
6. Exhibit travel posters, maps, pictures, etc. on the walls of your classroom to arouse interest in this part of the world.
7. Utilize interest aroused in other units, especially on South Asia or the Far East, to motivate a study of this part of the world.

Some General Experiences During the Unit

There are scores of activities in which students can profitably engage in a unit like this. Among them are the following:

1. Special study of village life in Southeast Asia.
2. Special attention to the topic of rice--reading about it, seeing film "Rice in Today's World (Coronet). Same on tin, rubber.
3. Reading of novels to understand this area better.
4. Discussion of the Dutch and Indonesian points of view on New Guinea.
5. Biographies of famous leaders of this area (See Kenworthy's Leaders of New Nations).
6. Mount pictures of a country or topic for use through an opaque projector.
7. Correspond with "pen pals" in this area/
8. Prepare or copy charts on resources for use by the entire class.
9. Make a study of Buddhism.
10. Make a study of the puppetry of Indonesia.
11. Listen to recordings of music from Southeast Asia.
12. Prepare rice dishes and serve to the group.
13. Interview persons who have lived or visited in parts of Southeast Asia.
14. Prepare a bulletin board exhibit of a country of Southeast Asia.
15. Write to various information offices and organizations and report on the materials received. File for use by future classes.
16. Trace the story of Indonesia's struggle for independence through the United Nations.
17. After you have studied this part of the world for a few days, visit a consul of one of the countries in a nearby city.
18. Present the case for and against "neutralism" in the cold war as seen by Southeastern Asians.
19. Report on the Colombo Plan and/or SEATO.

Some Background Material on Southeast Asia

A. The Importance of Southeast Asia.

1. 200,000,000 human beings, world neighbors.
2. Area primarily of new nations:
Burma, Cambodia, Laos, Indonesia, Malaya, and Viet Nam.
3. Vital and strategic mineral and food resources for world.
4. Social, economic and political upheavals
5. Struggle of Russia and Western World for this area.
6. Home of Buddhism.
7. Various forms of creativity in the past and present.

B. Land, Resources, Climate.

1. Mainland peninsula and archipelago--part of Asian continent.
2. Several good harbors.
3. Largely wet, hot climate, monsoon area.
4. Agricultural fertility of parts like Burma and Thailand.
5. Influence of volcanoes.
6. Many islands, especially Indonesia and the Philippines.
7. Rivers--such as Irrawady, Red, Mekong, Salween.
8. Resources: tin, rubber, rice, sugar, petroleum, manganese,

C. The People of Southeast Asia.

1. Mestiza (blend of Spanish with native Malay-Chinese) in the Philippines.
2. Annamese--Indonesia, Mongolian, Cambodians in Indo-China.
3. Burmese, Karens, Shans, Chins, Mons, Kachin in Burma.
4. Malaysian (India, Arab origin) in Malaya.
5. Approximately 10 million Chinese in Southeast Asia
6. Melanesian, Polynesian, Negrites, Mongolians, Chinese in Indonesia.

D. Confluence of the Indic and Sinitic Cultures.

1. Indian (Hindu, Buddhist, Moslem) cultures moving eastward.
 2. Chinese or Sinitic culture moving southward.
- See influence of both in some places.

E. Foreign Powers in Southeast Asia in Past (and Present)

1. French in Indo-China until recently.
2. British in Burma, Malaya, Singapore until recently; still in Hong Kong.
3. Dutch in Indonesia until recently; still claim New Guinea.
4. Portuguese in Timor

F. Creativity in The Arts.

1. Puppetry in Indonesia in particular
2. Architecture
3. Music
4. The Dance
5. Dress

Creativity in general adjustment to their environment, such as houses on stilts in some parts of this area.

G. Variety of Ways of Living.

1. Most people live in villages in "larger families".
2. Contrasting with such life are city people--highly cosmopolitan or Western--such as Manila--a highly western city in many respects.
3. Per capita income of area very low: Burma- $50, Cambodia $70, Indonesia $70, Laos, -$50, Malaya $350, Philippines $205, Singapore $400, Thailand $75/. This is per capita per year. Comparable figure for the U.S.A.--$2000.
4. Results in poor housing, poor health, illiteracy, and general low standards of living.
5. Revolution of rising expectations.

H. Two Outstanding Regional Groups

1. Colombo Plan--originally organized in Colombo, Ceylon, in 1950, to further economic development of British Commonwealth nations. Later expanded to include other nations in South and Southeastern Asia.
2. SEATO. Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, Composed of Australia, France, New Zealand, Pakistan, Philippines, Thailand, United Kingdom and U.S.A. for defense and mutual aid. Formed in 1954.

I. Some Outstanding Problems of New Nations (and Old) in SE. Asia

1. Internal security--guerilla warfare still in places like Burma, Malaya, Philippines.
2. Problems of plural societies in several countries. Malaya, for example, has about 3 million Malays, 2½ million Chinese, 760,000 Indians and Pakistani, 17,000 Europeans, 13,000 Eurasians, 68,000 others.
3. Building national feeling in countries which have not been free before or for a long time--Laos, Cambodia, etc.
4. Raising living standards in general.
5. Finding capital to industrialize.
6. Increasing and improving education for older people as well as for children. What kind(s) of education.
7. Territorial disputes. Indonesia in particular.
8. Language problems in plural states. Indonesia has developed a "new" language for the nation; Philippines adopted Tagalog.
9. Building social welfare institutions in large cities to help care for masses moving into cities.
10. Refugees. Particularly acute in Hong Kong, but evident elsewhere. South Viet Nam had to absorb about 1 million refugees
11. Training enough competent government officials for new nations.
12. What form shall governments take--democracy as interpreted in West or "guided democracies? Problem as seen in Indonesia, Thailand and Burma. Army leaders taking over or gaining more power.
13. Attitude towards China and Russia and the Cold War.
14. Land reform in several countries. Reforms under Magsaysay in the Philippines, changes in Indonesia, land to refugees in southern Viet Nam, etc.

Background Material on Individual Countries in Southeast Asia

Area of Southeast Asia 1,600,000 square miles.
 Area of the United States 3,082,809 square miles.

Population of Southeast Asia Around 200,000,000
 Population of the United States Around 170,000,000

Country	Sq. Miles	Population	Capital	Govt.	Chief Products
Burma	261,789	19,000,000	Rangoon	Repub.	Rice, teakwood, petroleum, tin, lead, cotton, silver, precious stones, tobacco.
Cambodia	70,000	3,500,000	Phnom Penh	Const. Monarchy	Rice, peppers, fish, tobacco, cotton, teak, kapok, silk, pottery.

Viet Nam (S)	66,000	12,000,000	Saigon	Repub.

Possible Culminating ACtivities

1. Prepare a program for another class on the major aspects of Southeast Asia.
2. Prepare a notebook on Southeast Asia for future classes.
3. Prepare a program for a P.T.A. meeting on Southeast Asia.
4. Have a group put some of what they have learned into a mural.
5. Select representative pictures of each country studied and mount them for showing through an opaque projector.
6. Have a general discussion on which of the countries you would like to work in--and why.
7. Show a filmstrip and criticize it from the knowledge you have gained. How would you change it if you were the editors?
8. Plan and give a radio or TV program for the general public on Southeast Asia.

Some Methods of Evaluating the Unit

1. Discussion by the class of what they did best, what they did less well, with suggestions for handling another unit.
2. Develop a quiz program, with students submitting questions. (better go over them before using in class).
3. Talk to the librarian about the use of the library.
4. Listen for comments from other teachers and from parents.
5. Have attitude test at beginning and end of the unit.
6. Have information test at the begining and end of the unit. Tell them ahead of time that you intend to do that and don't expect them to do too well on the pre-test.
7. XObserve committee and individual work.
8. Observe behavior when entertaining a visitor from abroad.
9. Watch for changes in the next unit on the basis of this unit.
10. Observe creative work on the basis of how well it represents the "feel" of this part of the world.

Some Important People in Southeast Asia

(This list is brief. You may want to add to it--or change it as events change the personnel of these countries).

Burma Aung San, U Nu, General Ne Win.
